International Relations & Politics

Subjects

International Relations | Politics | Law & Diplomacy | History

First-hand Experience of the Performing Arts Industry

This career-focused programme in London introduces high school students to the world of politics, diplomacy, and global governance, while developing English language fluency in an academic and professional context. The course combines theory with practical simulations—helping students develop both academic insight and transferable skills in debate, negotiation, and public speaking.

Outside the classroom, cultural excursions to places such as London's Parliament and City Hall provide first-hand exposure to the realities of governance and diplomacy, making this a truly immersive learning experience.

This subject introduces international relations as both an academic discipline and a professional practice. Taught by specialists in politics and global affairs, lessons balance theory with applied practice.

Course content may include:

- Political theory and key concepts in international relations
- Globalisation, trade, and interdependence
- International organisations and governance (UN, NATO, EU)
- Human rights and humanitarian intervention
- Security studies and contemporary conflicts
- Diplomacy, negotiation, and conflict resolution
